The Prayer on Bunker Hill.

During the battle of Bunker Hill, a venerable clergyman (Rev. Mr. McCuntock of Greenland, N. H.,) knelt on the field, with hands opraised, and grey head uncovered! and while the bullets whistled around him, prayed for the success of his compatriots, and the deliverance of his country. The incident has prompted the following beautiful ode from the pen of Mrs.

- "It was an hour of four and dread,-High rose the battle cry.
- And round, in heavy columns, spread The war cloud to the sky. Twas not, as when in rival strength Contending nations meet
- A monarch from his seat. "Yet one was there, unused to fread The path of mortal strife,

Or love of conquest mailly hurls

- Who but the Savior's flock has fed Beside the fount of life.
- He knelt him where the black smoke wreathed His head was bowed and bare,-While, for an infant land, he breathed The agony of prayer.
- The column, red with early morn, May tower o'er Bunker's height, And proudly tell a race unborn
- Their patriot father's might; But theu, O patriarch, old and grey, Thou prophet of the free, Who knelt among the dead that day,
- What fame shall rise to thee? It is not meet that brass or stone, Which feel the touch of time,
- Should keep the records of a faith That woke thy deeds sublime; We trace it on a tablet fair, Which glows when stars wax pale, A promise that the good man's prayer

Shall with his God prevait."

A Spicy Letter to General Sherman.

The Richmond Whig of January 24th published the following letter from "Asa Hartz" to General Sherman. "Asa Hartz" is the non de plume of Major E. G. McKnight, of Columbia (S. C.), formerly Assistant Adjutant General to the rebel General Loring. Major McKnight was captured near Jackson (Miss.), and confined for fourteen months on Johnson's Island. While there be wrote several neat pathetic and humorous poems which went the rounds of the Northern press, as did also his comical advertisement for a "substitute to stay in his place in prison." He left the rebel service on his exchange and became associate editor of the Columbia (S. C.) Guardian. His advice to General Sherman not to come his way is in his best style and is well worth perusing :

ASA HARTZ TO GENERAL SHERMAN. GENTLE WARRIOR :- The sweet young female patriot of the Confederacy, who periodically bathes my classic brow, has just left my bedside in the 290 Hospital. Before leaving, she informed me that you intend to come up this way in a short time, if not

Mr. Sherman, don't do it. I cannot say, my hero, that you occupy the most loving corner of my heart of Hartz, nor that you are a particularly proper bosom companion of my unele J. D. or "old Blizzard;" still I like you with muchness, and do not wish you to take a contract which you cannot fill. Appreciate duly the kind motives but this section of the once great United States is engaged in a war-a war of some magnitude, too-and multiplied. Provisions, in sections where there is a by which you may reasonably be expected to travel, do not fancy your peculiar style. Fondly believing you are not a good egg, and that you are not over nice respecting the materials of which your fires are built, they will very naturally place obstructions in your way, and might even so far forget what is due Southern hospitality as to fire at you with ball cartridge. They are simple-minded creatures, my gallant warrior, and don't know any better.

I mention these little things, magnificent Yank, as but a small portion of the difficulties which will make your excursion anything but pleasant. They are by no means the most prominent. Let me tel! you a lit-There was a gallant and festive chap from Florida, who used to answer roll call in block fourteen, mess two. He was a member of the lapstone rangers, my here, and as such broke into the prison block aforesaid like a man. He had the bad taste to dislike his quarters, and was simple enough to entertain a desire for freedom. So one day he thought of a plan to break out, and, all unknown to the other lapstones, put it into execution. Time passed on, and the day arrived on which he fondly hoped to leave his prison walls. He started, my Western hero, but didn't go far before he ran his head against an ounce of leadand stopped. The lady he used to board with never got another letter from him. He sleeps now where I never wish to visit again, and he doesn't care for the

My hero, the chap referred to, undertook a journey unadvisedly, and never made the trip. In view of his fate, and applying it to your own case, allow me to repeat with gentle firmness-don't come!

Should you rashly conclude to follow the bent of your own judgment, my worthy conqueror, and try to come any how, take advice founded upon experience, and eschew all railroad lines. If you undertake the trip by rail, you will die of old age before you reach Danville. Danville, my sweet General, is supposed to be in the bosom of the mother of States, a geographical fact open to doubt, and, but for the extremely cold temperature which prevailed there the last time your trump passed through, liable to the imputation of being in the bosom of the Father of Lies. Don't stop at Danville, Mr. Sherman, unless you have made your peace with heaven and settled with your hundress. A night there would be an infliction too great for my worst enemy to bear.

Finally, if you will come, my gentle warrior, bring your dinner and stay a week. You will find me at the 290 Hospital in Columbia. where I am engaged in the highly interesting pastime of robbing the cradle and the grave. I have sacked fifteen cradles in the last sixteen days, and interred all of the spoils except one-an interesting infant of seventy five Summers. I am saving him, my hero, to start a new graveyard with near Charlotte, in the State of North Carolina. Don't forget to call on Generals Hardee, Beauregard, Johnston, Hill, Taylor, Bragg and other gentlemen of military instincts, as you come by. They are a jolly and interesting set, and will entertain you in a highly satisfactory manner-to themselves.

Remember me soothingly to your Chief Commissary. Yours, in a suggestive way, 290 Hospital, January 23. ASA HARTZ.

which govern me in this, my gallant Yank, and do Draw Bills of Exchange on justice to the affectionate heart of your considerate My hero, I don't know if you are aware of the fact, all the little annoyances incident to a condition of war prevail to a certain extent here. The means of transportation are not so abundant as they might have been had peace continued and railroad companies scarcity, are not so plentiful as they would be if there were more of them.
